

EDITORIAL

I am delighted to write a few words by way of introducing this special, themed issue of Psychotherapy and Politics International on Body Psychotherapy, edited by Nick Totton.

For many years, Nick has contributed to the development of practice in body psychotherapy and of its theory. I am grateful to him for offering to edit a special issue on this topic, and for bringing together different voices in contemporary neo-Reichian therapy.

Nick was this journal's founding editor and, as this is the 50th issue of the journal, it is appropriate that he has edited it—tēnā koe, thank you, Nick.
